Emory University Unit Signature Guidelines

The Emory unit signature consists of an Emory tier-one logo such as Emory University School of Medicine, in addition to the name of the Emory University department, center, office, program, library, etc. A tier-one logo is currently for schools only.

Emory tier-one logos should reproduce only in Emory blue (PMS 280), black, or white.

The unit signatures reproduce in Emory blue and black, all black, or all white. The shield height should reproduce at 3/8" or larger.

The primary unit signature is horizontal in the Emory blue and black. Emory website banners incorporate the all-white unit signature over the Emory blue.

This primary unit signature is provided as an eps and pdf. The eps can be placed in any layout program and in word-processing programs. The pdf can be viewed easily.

It is beneficial to use the Emory University logo in order to be aligned with the established brand of the University.

Emory University Stacked and Initiative Unit Signature Guidelines

The stacked unit signature allows the ability to convey even more information about the organization of your unit. Unit signatures [show example] consist of a top-tier logo such as Emory University or a school logo, in addition to the name of the University department, center, office, or program. As noted in the following example, a stacked signature provides another line of information on the right. Hence, in the example, the Creative Writing Program signals its inclusion as part of the Emory College of Arts and Sciences.

Emory school level logos should reproduce only in Emory blue (PMS 280), black, or white.

The stacked unit signatures reproduce in Emory blue and black, all black, or all white. The shield height should reproduce at 3/8" or larger.

The primary stacked unit signature is horizontal in the Emory blue and black. Website banners incorporate the all-white stacked unit signature over the Emory blue.

The stacked unit signature is provided as an eps and pdf. The eps can be placed in any layout or word-processing program. The pdf can be viewed easily.

It is beneficial to use the Emory University logo in order to be aligned with the established brand of the University.
